The final corpus consisted of 417 texts. The differing number of texts by discipline is due to the presence or absence of different review types in certain disciplines and time periods (e.g., there were no peer-reviewed, qualitative reviews published in education in 1950, but this type of review existed in psychology and medicine at that time).

From an early age we learn to live in a world with numbers: on classroom doors, street signs, price tags, our phones, on our work activities. Typically we learn how numbers and quantities relate to each other (e.g., smaller, larger) from an early age; and most of us received some formal training in math, starting from grade school.
